A War In Mind is a collection of poems which attempt to illustrate the internal struggle of one who is faced by the mental contention of being half at peace and half at war with their own identity. The poems within this book reveal a man with a penetrating attachment to finding his authentic self by contemplating such things as love, people, mountains, streams and relationships. He uses these landscapes to artistically convey life's brittle and unforgiving moments that can cause a man to seek refuge in isolation and write from the heart...
